CATALOG DESCRIPTION

This field Lab provides support for ANTH 175, which gives students with an understanding of surf culture in the Pacific Basin. Environmental and cultural factors are assessed in relation to surfing’s development in Polynesia, integration into Hawaiian culture, decline due to Western influence, and revitalization as a modern recreational activity by visiting sites around O‘ahu. The modern surfing industry is also assessed through a cultural perspective that analyzes business practices utilized by surfing organizations today.

Activities Required at Scheduled Times Other Than Class Times

Many locations are far from WCC Campus, and time will be given (1/2 hour) for travel to each destination. Be prepared to go over class time on some occasions, and allow for time to travel to your next destination. Please be aware, several labs are scheduled as double labs on the weekend. These labs are very important and you must make every effort to make them, since they count as double for both points and time. Regularly scheduled labs will be canceled in lieu of these labs.

RECOMMENDED BASIC SKILL LEVELS:

While there are no requirements for water skills in this course, several optional field activities require the ability to swim. However, the student should not be discouraged from taking the course if the student cannot swim. Much can be learned through the onshore demonstrations offered at each lab; and the instructor has alternative, land-based activities for those students who wish to stay dry. There is also a considerable amount of walking, sometimes off-road, so please be prepared with appropriate clothing and gear, sun protection, and water. Mahalo.
STUDENT LEARNING OUTCOMES

At the successful completion of this course students will be able to:

1. Demonstrate a basic knowledge of environmental and cultural factors affecting the development of surfing on O`ahu.
2. Discuss some reasons for surfing’s cultural integration in pre-contact Hawaii.
3. List important legendary characters relating to surfing and discuss their significance.
4. Display an understanding of surfing’s integration into Hawaiian culture, its decline in urban centers due to Western influence, and its revitalization as a modern recreational activity.
5. Coherently address modern social issues relating to surfing.

COURSE TASKS

Evaluation of the student’s achievement of course objectives will be based upon attendance and class participation, completion of homework assignments, quizzes, and written examinations.

50 points  ATTENDANCE:  Attendance and active participation in this laboratory/field class are essential if the student is to benefit from enrollment in ANTH 165L. Therefore, the student must attend 10 of the 13 scheduled laboratory/field activities (Labs 2 - 14; see syllabus). The student will receive five points for fully attending each of these laboratory/field activities (50 points total).

PARTICIPATION:  Active participation involves being present for all class sessions, submission of assignments prior to discussion, active listening, contribution to discussion, and asking pertinent questions. Points will be subtracted for any arrival over 10 minutes passed the agreed meeting time.

25 points  HOMEWORK ASSIGNMENTS:  Thank you letters will be written to each person who shares their mana`o with the class, scheduled or otherwise. Please be prepared to hand these in the lab following such a visit. The points will be divided by the number of speakers for whom the letters are written, and graded by the number of letters completed by the student.

50 points  DAILY JOURNAL.  The student will develop and maintain a journal in which observations, thoughts, and analyses of the laboratory/field activities are recorded (50 points total). This journal will be submitted at the end of the semester. The instructor may inspect these journals anytime throughout the semester.

50 points  EXAMINATIONS:  A Field Examination on weather and beach assessments, and a Final Examination will be given covering the lecture topics, reading assignments, demonstrations, and internet exercises/resources.
