CATALOG DESCRIPTION

This college-level composition course promotes critical reading, the writing process, rhetorical principles, research strategies, and the documentation of sources. As part of the Hawaiiloa Cohort, this class has an emphasis on incorporating cultural knowledge as a means of studying composition and rhetoric. This is a 3 credit hour course.

Prerequisites: Grade of “C” or better in ENG 22, OR placement into ENG 100, OR grade of “C” or better in ENG 23 and corequisite enrollment in ENG 100W, OR placement and enrollment in co-requisite ENG 100W OR grade of “C” or better in ENG 100W OR approval of designated Language Arts representative.

Required Texts:

All of our readings will be available online.

Other Required Activities

1. Students are required to meet with professor at least once prior to submission of all major assignments.
2. This class is run on the free version of Canvas, and an account is required. All assignment submissions will be through Canvas.
3. Complete WCC Library Research Units.

STUDENT LEARNING OUTCOMES

1. Engage in a writing process that includes exploring ideas, considering multiple points of view, developing and supporting a thesis, revising with the help of peer and instructor feedback, editing, and proofreading.
2. Write complex and well-reasoned compositions in language, style, and structure appropriate to particular purposes and audiences.
3. Find, evaluate, integrate, and properly document information from libraries, the internet, and other sources, with an eye for reliability, bias, and relevance.
4. Read for main points, perspective, and purpose, and analyze the effectiveness of a variety of rhetorical strategies in order to integrate that knowledge into their writing.

COURSE CONTENT

Course Description

This course is structured around sustainability. Sustainability in Hawai'i, specifically, relies on a relationship and an understanding with the land. By planting yourself on the land, by observing, by studying the history—then you can truly be sustainable. This semester we'll be learning about what makes something Hawai'ian, and therefore what constitutes sustainability here in these islands.

The goal of this course is to center you in community, in self, and in your physical place in the world. To do so, we will be using Remix theory as we employ the art of rhetoric, and good writing. Remix Theory seeks to transform, and that is our goal in this course. You will be asked to transform your early work into a new texts that respond to a new rhetorical situations. You will be working throughout the entire semester to translate your initial texts or ideas as a way to enter into a larger conversation, to transform your writing from one audience and goal to another.

The semester will work as outlined below:

1. Copy
2. Transform
3. Combine

Using this model of creation, students will learn to first absorb, to then conceptualize projects, plan and organize their energies and ideas, give and receive feedback, and to finally combine resources to create a draft, and revise.

After writing the first major paper, students will begin the process of Remix. The second major paper relies on researching and adding credible voices to their own voice, and reflecting on edits and changes that must occur in order to keep the argument cohesive and persuasive for a larger conversation that included more people than just the student.

The final project is a culminating assignment that transforms the idea that has been built on in the second major paper. This project must be multi-modal, which means it must use a different form than just writing. Possible projects could be, but are not limited to, the following:

Podcast	Video	Infographic	Memes	Storyboard/comic
Poster	Website (wix)	Twitter feeds	Fictionalizing non-fiction
ThingLinks	Narrative Collage	Mele/Carvings/Hula	etc.

This class will rely heavily on the student's ability to master the Rhetorical Triangle. This means that students will learn to 1) create a position of authority for themselves, via voice and using credible supporting sources, 2) identify, target, and speak to different audiences, and 3) use good logic to analyze supporting sources, counterarguments, and to also demonstrate knowledge in an efficient and persuasive manner.

Major Assignments

The assignments in this course are designed to increase in complexity. The first assignments you have will be worth fewer points so that you can get familiar with putting the expectations of the course into action. Remember that you will need to schedule at least one tutoring session for every major assignment. You can do that by going to the Writing Center or by going to this Other Writing Center. Here's a brief description of the major assignments and the order they will occur:

Personal Essay: You will write a 2-3 page opinionated paper showcasing your voice and your ability to appeal to and persuade an audience. This is a creative essay, but it is also an argumentative essay. This means you need to have a viewpoint, to enter a conversation with differing sides. The focus of this paper will be on Pathos & Ethos, how to persuasively communicate your experience and ideas to a specific target audience.

Researched Analysis: After creating your own opinionated paper, you'll then build on that original idea to develop it as part of a larger conversation. This means that you are responsible for understanding context, for knowing how and where to research, and finally analyzing the differences in these sources. The goal of the assignment is to look outside of yourself. The student seeks to center themselves in the available credible information, to draw conclusions from this information that help to shape your understanding in a cogent and thoughtful way.

This essay will be 3-4 pages of analysis on the Research you do to center your ideas. This is a critical look, and relies heavily on your ability to logically and carefully work through your own and other authors' ideas. The focus of this paper will be on Logos, and using language to lay bare a rhetorical situation.

Remixed Final Project: Throughout the semester, you'll be working to draft a Remixed Final Project. In this final assignment, you'll combine the knowledge you've cultivated on your chosen artifact, and transform it all into a cohesive multi-modal argument. This means you'll have to reflect, edit, recast and rethink the work you've created thus far in the semester. The goal is to showcase your understanding of the Rhetorical Situation--that after identifying a target audience (pathos), that you can logically edit and choose which information to keep and which to let go of (logos), and that you can use good authority to persuade (ethos). This project is not based on how polished the final project is, as the goal is not to master a new program or skill like drawing. Instead, the final project will be graded on awareness of the rhetorical situation, and the efficacy of the choices made in editing and combining the first two projects.

Minor Assignments

Quizzes & Discussions: Quizzes will occur at the end of each week. These quizzes are meant to act as reflection on your learning for the past week to help prepare you for the upcoming learning next week. You cannot make up the points for missed quizzes, you must take the quizzes on time.

ASSESSMENT TASKS AND GRADING

LEARNING RESOURCES

All of our readings will be available online.

- MLA formatting at Purdue OWL
- The Writing Center
- Ka Piko
- WCC Library
- Tutor.com

*As a note, your tutoring sessions will go best if you share the assignment description and rubric with your tutor. Ask them for specific help with specific problems, DO NOT go in and ask them to "fix it."

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Late Assignments: Assignments are due on Canvas on the specified dates. After the due date, an assignment will lose 10% per day, up to 50%. Afterwards, assignments are only eligible to receive half credit. Quizzes & Discussions, and Peer Reviews must be turned in on time, and cannot be made up after their due date.

**If you have trouble keeping up or have unforeseen extenuating circumstances, talk to me before you have a problem. For example, do not come to me on the day a paper is due and tell me you haven't completed it because you have been sick. I can't work with you unless you tell me that you are struggling with your assignment well before the due date.

Communication: When in doubt, consult the Canvas first. It is your guide to what reading/homework assignments will be due for each class period. If Canvas doesn't answer your question, ask your classmates or go to the modules. If you still have a question after consulting the syllabus, your classmates, AND Canvas, please text me and I will try to respond as quickly as I can. Please check your email and announcements regularly.

Writing Center: You should visit the Writing Center AT LEAST once per major assignment. Schedule an appointment early or you may not get an appointment. For each major assignment (Personal Essay, Researched Analysis, Remix Final Project), you must go to the Writing Center for help somewhere in the writing process (brainstorming, outlining, or revision).

Failure Policy: You have the potential to fail the course if you are plagiarizing any work at any point. You also have the potential to fail the course if you get too far behind. HOWEVER, I do not want you to fail if you get behind. Contact me. There's usually a fair and reasonable way to help you succeed even if your work is late.

Required Format: All papers submitted for this course must be typed with 1-inch margins in Times New Roman 12-point font, double spaced. They must also adhere to current MLA (Modern Language Association) style guidelines. The Purdue OWL online is an excellent resource for MLA style; you can also visit the Writing Center's MLA Reference Section for detailed formatting rules. Please do not attempt to alter assignment length by changing fonts, margins, etc.
